8:30-11:30-Morning session
11:30-12:30-Lunch
12:30-3:30 Afternoon session

A powerful connection exists between the way children learn to talk, their language experiences, and the way they learn to read and write. This one-day training will highlight the current research on early literacy learning skills and instructional strategies in preschool and kindergarten that provide the foundation for the next steps of early reading and writing. You will gain a deeper your understanding of the early literacy processes in oral language, phonological awareness, and print knowledge and take away key strategies that make an important difference for the young children in your care.

Learning Objectives:

1. Describe the general stages and age expectations of the early literacy foundations
 2. Outline vocabulary and storybook reading routines
 3. Plan effective ways of embedding phonological awareness into everyday routines.
- Describe developmentally appropriate instructional strategies to help young children enhance their alphabet learning and being a writer

Prerequisites: Participants should bring a children's book that will be used for instruction in the following weeks.
